But Can Not Run Them Against Competition of Government and Foreign Ships.

Although the Inter-Island steamship company is looking to the future with reference to the coal business, particularly in view of the opening of the Panama Canal, when it is expected that the largest freighters and passenger vessels from many parts of the world may use Honolulu as a port of call, vet the officials feel that their plans may depend largely upon whether they can build colliers cheap enough to enable them to transport their coal supplies from Australia to Honolulu.

The company has had under consideration the construction of at least two great colliers for coal carrying exclusively, but the cost of such vessels, if built in American shipyards, is prohibitive. The plans under consideration were found to be almost identifical with those of the navy department for the Mars and Prometheus, each of which cost over half a million. The same vessels, if built in foreign the cost of obtaining and transporting 6.50; 730 Paauhau, 28.75 to 30; 1237 shippards, would cost about half that | coal from Australia to Honolula would amount, but being built in foreign be large. countries they would have to fly a forerence to putting them in the Pacfic

The cost of operating such vessels much greater than vessels flying foreign flags with which they would have to compete. The Inter-Island company which recently installed one of the finest of modern coal-handling plants manufactured in New York, a plant which involved an expediture of several hundred thousand dollars, has also found itself in competition with the United States government, or more particuarly the navy deparament. The Inter-Island company has frequently coaled foreign warships. But the system employed by the navy department in more recent times of transporting coal from Norfolk to Honolulu in British colliers, and of supplying that coal to whatever warships entered port and asked for it, has put the Inter-Island company in a position where it could not make a bid for supplying such ships. The ompany realizes that there is a cerain degree of international courtesy delegation." to be observed on the part of the navy department toward the warship visitors of other nations, but every warship calling here recently has had its bunkers supplied from the naval station coal

The navy department lands its coal ere from Norfolk in British colliers t a very low price, a little over $3. As the British colliers have few "exras'' to pay, which they would if hey were bringing coal to private cor porations, they are able to land the cal at an unusually low price. Although they come many thousand miles more than steamers from Australia and take about thirty days longer on their trips around the Horn, yet the price s far below what coal can be landed for to private enterprises from Austra-ion collieries. The Inter-Island company supplied some of the Japanese warships with has the right to enter into competition with vested interests of private corporations. Even with Americanbuilt colliers, the company feels that

Of course, many of the warships preeign flag, and the company would have fer anthracite coal to the softer coal white elephant on its hands with ref- from Australia, and it is the anthracite which the naval station can supply. Whatever development in the business is necessary to meet conditions the if built in America, under the present Inter-Island company plans to carry in-American system of wages, would be to effect, but the company will go slow B. & M. Co., 22,50 to 23.75; 20 Haw. taking any steps.

The following dispatch from Washington, dated November 22, is in line with the local feeling on this subject: "Shipowners of San Francisco, complaining that they have many vessels dle in Oakland creek, while foreign hips are enjoying a large patronage from the United States government, are taking steps to lay the situation before the President and his cabinet "The shipping of coal for the Navy in foreign bottoms is the particular cause of complaint. The government's allowance to the American shipowner of an additional percentage in order that he may compete has not proved enough to meet the cheap charters, and a larger bonus will be asked. The matter is to be taken up through Secretary Meyer by representatives of San Francisco and members of the California

The postmaster at Kenlakekua keeps few valuables or little money in the postoffice, which is small as his house is in the immediate rear. He takes coal, but the last warship here from all money and stamps home with him in Japan was furnished with coal from the evening and the robber would not
